AN HISTORICAL EVENT. He Makes the 41 Miles Between Peckskill and New York at Four Miles an Hour, and Sides a Balled at the Spot Where His Father Helped Capture Major Andre. Pierre Paulding, the son of John Paulding. celebrated in history and ballad as one of the three farmer-boy captors of Major Andre. is a guest at the Vanderbilt Hotel in Fortysecond street and Lexington avenue. He is the twenty-first and posthumous son of John Paulding, who died April 30, 1818, at the age of tio. Saturday was the seventy-fifth anniversary of Mr. Paulding's birth, and some time ago he decided to selebrate the day by walking from his home in Peekskill to New York, forty-four miles, by the old Albany post route. A large number of his friends assembled to see him start. Promptly at 6 o'clock he set out. He is small and of slight build, but he is a son of his father and carries through anything he undertakes. He set off at a clipping four-mile pace, which he maintained through the day. At Croton Mrs. Pierre Van Cortlandt, for whose father he was named. insisted upon his stopping for a short chat.

At Tarrytown, eighteen miles from the start. which piace was reached at 10:30, took place the most interesting ceremony of the trip. A which pince was reached at 10:30, took place the most interesting ceremony of the trip. A throng met him at the monument on Broadway just above the village, which marks the piace of the British spy's capture by Paulding and his companions, Isaac Williams and David Van Wart. They were seated on a rock near the brook when Major Andre unsuspectingly rode his horse to the stream for water and was made a prisoner by them.

When Pierre Faulding reached this spot new life seemed to thrill him. With proud step he approached and doffed his soft slouch hat. Then, loosening his neck searf, he sang in a hold voice the old Revolutionary ballad of "John Paulding, or the Capture of Major Andre." This song was published in 1783. It resites the story of the capture and abounds in glorification of its heroes.

Mr. Paulding was met here by his son, who came down by rail to see that all was well with him. He started off again at 12 and at Yonkers he stopped for dinner. Then pushing along down Breadway he reached the end of his tramp at 7:30 o'clock, having entered the former boundary of the city over kingsbridge. It was a remarkable waik for a man of his age, forty-four miles in eleven hours of actual walking time. He said yesterday that the only elfects he felt were the slight soreness of his calves that night, but even this had gone. Pierre Paulding's father was a country boy about 22 years old when he became famous. He had just escaped from the British uniform in order to elude his cantors, and, swimming the Harlem River, seized a stray cance, in which he crossed the Hudson at Sputten Duy-vil. He walked up the west shore to Stony Point, where friends ferried him to verplanck's Foint. From there he was on his way home when he fell in with his comrades. It happened that they were playing cards when Andre rode up, None of the three men who effected the capture was in active army sorvice. For their alertness on this occasion a farm was given to each of the three. The old Paulding farm, upon which Pierre Faulding was born, lies near

A Drunken Waiter Creates Lots of Excite. ment at Wendel's Casino.

A drauken waiter frightened the patrons of Wender's Casino at 194th street and Amsterdam avenue on Saturday night, and besides wounding the head walter seriously, he in-flicted painful injuries upon the proprietor of the place. The waiter is Conrad Gessler, a German, 20 years old. When some of the guests complained of the man's behavior Julius Weiner, the head watter, told him to pack up his things and get out. Gessler went to his room ostensibly to change his clothes. He reappeared armed with a sword cane nearly thirty inches long and as sharp as a needle at the point. He made a dash at Wiener with the weapon, and Proprietor Huber went to Weiner's assistance.

Jossier jumped here and there, lunging at the men with the glittering weapon until it was broken in three pieces and his victims were bleeding from a dozen wounds about the face arms, and hands. He then threw down the worthless aword, and drawing a pocket-knife, again dashed at Weiner. Before he could do further damage he was disarmed and placed under arrest.

Weiner was unable to appear in court yeaterday, and will be confined to the housefor three or four days. Huber's injuries were less serious, and he made a comblaint of felbnious assault against Gessler, upon which he was beid for trial in $1,000 bail. clothes. He reappeared armed with a sword

HUGH M'LAUGHLIN AT THE HELM. A Red-hot Campaign in Prospect in Brook-lyn This Fall.

Hugh McLaughlin, the veteran leader of the Democratic forces in Kings county, got back from his vacation on Saturday night, and with his reappearance the preliminary work of the campaign will begin. In a few days all his lieutenants will have returned, and the usual daily conferences at the Willoughby street headquarters, in Brooklyn, which always pre-sedes a campaign, will be held. Mr. McLaughlin is apparently in fine form, and his intimate friends say that he is not half as much worried as some of his followers over the political prospects this fall. Although i is generally accepted that Mayor Boody will receive a renomination, there are some wellinformed politicians who believe that at the last moment he will be put aside and a new informed politicians who believe that at the last moment he will be put aside and a new man chosen as the candidate. Mayor Boody himself has said that he does not care for a renomination or rediction, except as a vindication. In view of the persistent assaults on his administration.

The choice of a candidate for Sheriff is likely to cause more friction than that for Mayor. William A. Furey, who got a nomination for this office a few years ago and was defeated is anxious to try his chances a second time. His chief competitor for the nomination is Daniel Ryan, a popular South Brooklyn leader. The prize, it is thought, will eventually be carried off by some influential German Democrat of the Eastern district, it being the settled purpose of the leaders to solidify the German vote as far as possible this year.

Thomas E. Pearsall seems to have the inside track for the nomination for the place on the Supreme Court bench, which will become vacant at the close of the year through the retirement of Judge Barnard by the age limitation. He stands well with the lawyers and is regarded as entirely acceptable to the Willoughby street leaders and the organization in general. The only other aspirants so far mentioned are Corporation Counsel Jenks, John P. Adams and Charles J. Patterson.

George Kinkel can have a renomination for Supervisor-at-Large, it is said, if he desires it. Senator McCarren will go back to Albany this year, and Senator McCarty will probably accompany him, in spite of his expressed desire to retire temporarily from active political work. The other two Democratic Senators from Kings county are likely to be Michael J. Coffey and Jame - Kane.

The Republicans have only one of the five districts, but no one will be able, positively, to tell who the lucky candidate will be until the Convention is held.

It is admitted on all sides that the Mayoralty candidate will be until the tell who the lucky candidate will be until the Convention is held.

It is admitted on all sides that the Mayoralty campaign this year is going to be a red hot one, and that the result will largely depend on the policy of the kepublican leaders. At present it seems to have been settled that an outland-out Republican candidate will be named, regardless of the wishes of the so-called independent Democratic bodles, who are opposed to the regular organization and are anxious that a coalition candidate should be chosen. Ex-Senator Jacob Worth, who is the acknowledged boss of the Republican forces, says that there will be no direct alliance with Democratic "kickers." He wants a clean-cut, square fight between the two regular rival organizations. Next Monday night the Democratic General Committee will meet and start the campaign.

During the Family's Absence. When Col. W. C. Ely, a member of the Stock Exchange, took his family to the country last July he left his house at 102 West Seventy-Orst street in charge of Annie Johnson, a colored servant, who had been a month in the household. The family returned to town unexpectedly last week. Annie was greatly surprised to see them, and announced that she was going away at once, as she was very ill. Two hours after the servant had gone Mrs. Ely found that silverware, linen, silks, clothing, and furniture valued at $1,500 were missing. She reported the roubery to lispector Melaughlin, who detailed Detective Sergeants Vallely and Evanhoe on the case. The detectives located the servant girl at 243 West Vallely and Evanhoe on the case. The detectives located the servant girl at 243 West Thirty-second street. They secreted themselves in her room on Friday afternoon. The girl did not appear until Saturday morning when she was arrested. About Swo worth of the stolen proporty was found in the foom. ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Sept. 3.—There has been a drought in Englewood to-day. appeared before that body and by permission read a paper on the liquor traffic in the town. The committee has nothing to do with regulating licenses, but Mr. Mackay took the ground that it should use its influence to suppress unlicensed barrooms, giving the names of seven persons conducting such piaces.

Thus admonished, the Township Committee instructed the police force of the town to see that every barroom in Englewood was closed to-day, and the order was so emphasized that it was strictly carried out. Not even the most particularly well-known customer could find a door open, and a number of the proprietors appeared on the streets to show that they were not on duty. This condition of dryness will continue until the Bergen County Grand Jury, which will meet on Sept. 12, has discharged its duty and adjourned, when there will be a resumption of humidity in the atmosphere of Englewood barrooms.

Sauerkraut Not Good Enough for IIIm. Franz Eckler is a German shoemaker and lives at 253 West Thirty-second street with his son Frank. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning the father and son sat down in the kitchen to eat. Mr. Eckler got some sauerkraut from the cupboard and placed it before his son. "That is rotten cabbage," said the boy. "It is fit only for hogs."

"Mein Gott!" said Mr. Eckler. "Otto von Bismarek, Kaiser Wilhelm, and your own father ate it and got fat on it. You are a hog rather at all and got fat on it. You are a nog yourself."

The boy grabbed a knife and fork and rushed at his father. In the struggle that followed the boy was stabbed three times. Polleeman Harrett arrested Mr. Eckler and called a doctor for the son.

THE FOTE AGAINST SILVER.

Last Monday's vote in the House of Representatives upon the repeal of the silver pur-chase clause of the Sherman act has settled. as I pointed out that it would, much more than the question immediately involved. The advocates of free silver coinage insisted upon first having the judgment of the House taken apon their favorite measure, and they got it n a shape which ought to satisfy them that they are finally and hopelessly beaten. The country, through its representatives, has defi-nitely pronounced against the free coinage of silver either at the ratio of 16 to I, or at any other ratio whatever, and has declared itself equally opposed to a revival of the old Bland-Allison act. This result was reached, too, after a prolonged debate, during which the subject was exhaustively discussed and the arguments n both sides thoroughly presented.

Much impatience is naturally felt at the desy of the Senate in ratifying the decision of the House, and thus putting the finishing touch to the work accomplished on Monday. but there is no ground for anxiety in regard the matter. The only point about which doubts may be entertained is whether the Senate will adopt the bill passed by the House. or whether it will substitute for it, as is now proposed, its own bill, directed to the same end. Both bills are identical in language, so far as stopping silver purchases is concerned, but the name of the Representative who introduced t. concludes with this clause:

that this repeal shall not impair or in any manner of the legal render quality of the standard sliver dollars beretofore coined; and the faith and credit of the United States are hereby pledged to maintain the parity of the standard gold and silver coins of the United States at the present legal ratio, or such other ratio as may be established by law.

The Senate bill, presented by Senator Voorees and therefore called the Voorhees bill. adds to repeal this declaration:

And it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money, and to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, such equality to be secured through international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the maintenance of the parity in value of the coins of the two metals and the equal power of every deliar at all times in the markets and in the pay ment of debts. And it is hereby further deciared that the efforts of the Government should be steadily di-rected to the establishment of such a safe system of bimetallism as will maintain at all times the equal power of every dollar coined or issued by the United States in the markets and in the payment of debts.

Of these two additions to the abolition of further eliver purchases, that of the House of Representatives, it will be seen, merely provides for the maintenance at par with gold of the sliver dollars heretofore coined. That of the Senate, on the other hand, both does this and favors a continuation of the efforts to so often proved futile, and which are likely to do so till the end of time. In it, therefore, the friends of silver in the Senate have a peg upon which to hang prolix dissertations upon the future fate of silver, and it the Senate bill should go to the House the subject of pimetallism may come up there also for debate, and thus postpone final action. Still, after Monday's emphatic rejection of free silver coinage by the popular branch of the national legislature, no fear need be entertained that any discussion and any delay will result in the restoration of the silver standard under the guise of bimetallism. What the debates preceding Monday's vote did for free coinage is sure to be done for bimetallism by similar debates upon that subject. Many plausible fallacies in regard to it will be refuted and tenaciously held falsohoods exposed, and the end will be an enlightment of public opinion in every way beneficial, We have seen already, for example, Senator Hear explode and Senator Sherman blow to the winds the fiction that the passage of the act of 1873 was recured by bribery. A like service was done in the House by Mr. Cockran and others in refuting the favorite assertion of the silver men that the depreciation of silver since 1873 is due to its demonstration by this country in that year; the fact being that the demonstization complained of took piace in 1834, no silver dollars of any considerable amount having been coined at our mints since 1834 until 1878. Besides, in 1873 silver, like gold, was out of use as money in this country, and the law formaily dropping the silver dollar from the list of actual coins had no effect upon the price of the metal whatever. If, now, either in the Senate or in the House of Representatives, renewed efforts should be made in behalf of bimetallism, it is to be hoped that the occasion will not be lost to expose, so that it shall be plain to every citizen, its true character as a scheme to establish silver monometallism. The most plausible bimetallist project is that of an agreement by all the great civilfred nations of the earth to fix a ratio between sliver and gold at which the two metais shall be accepted as standards of value and as mediums for the discharge of money obligations. Apart, however, from the insuperable obstacle presented thus far to its success by the refusal of Great Britain to join in it, there is one in the very nature of things which cannot be overcome by human legislation. The Governments of the civilized world may, indeed, agree to make a given number of ounces of silver the equivalent of one ounce of gold, but they cannot compel their citizens to ratify the agreement so long as the ratio thus fixed is more favorable to either metal than the law of supply and demand justifles. The world's annual production of silver, under every discouragement, has tripled since 1873, while that of gold, stimulated by the universal demand for it, has increased only by one-third. Let, now, the production of silver be in turn stimulated and that of gold discouraged by an international agreement increasing the exchangeable value of silver compared with that of gold, and a further increase in the production of silver. accompanied by a decrease in that of gold. would be sure to follow. Nebody would mine gold and sell it to be coined at the rate of one ounce for sixteen ounces of silver when its relative cost was more than that. We tried in this country, from 1789 to 1834, to make, by law. 15 ounces of silver equal to one ounce of DF. WITT, -Suddenly, on Aug 81, John E. De Witt | gold, but this undervalued gold and it censed to be used at the legal valuation because it was worth more in the market. Then, in 1854, we enacted that 16 ounces of silver should be equal to one of gold, and as this in turn undervalued silver, that metal went out of use as money and left us only gold. We did not even have any silver small change of our own until. 1853, we established for silver fractional coin the debased standard of 14 to 1, and thus kept it in the country. Of course it will be said that we were not supported in our efforts to fix either of the unsuccessful ratios by the rest of the world, and the example of France and the Latin Union is cited as showing what may be done in this respect by the combined action of even a few nations. The answer to this is that the ratio adopted by the Latin Union was maintained imperfectly, and only so long as it con formed nearly to the commercial ratio of gold and silver bullion as fixed by supply and demand. Moreover, it had to be abandoned so soon as silver bullion began to be produced in increasing quantities and to fall in gold price Nor has any country which has nominally maintained bimetallism at the ratio which prevailed prior to 1875 been able to do it effectually, but has sunk, as Mexico and the South American States have sunk, into sliver monometallism. We should do the same if we reënacted our old law for the coinage of silver. and it was from this fate that we were luckily though unintentionally delivered by the much abused Coinage act of 1873. Bimetallism, whether international or only national, is, therefore, only disguised silver monometallism. It is the vampire soul seeking a new body, in place of the recently slain free silver coinage corpse. Its partisaus may

The Tory landowners of Great Britain, whose estates are encumbered with debts and interest charges, find themselves in the same predicament with the owners of mortgaged American forms and plantations, and with the rent-paying tenants of Ireland. Under the gold standard the market value of agricultural produce has fallen, and is likely to fall still lower. To avert this fall, and, if possible, to change it into a rise, the British Tories, the Irish tenants, and the American farmers and planters would willingly substitute the silver for the gold standard. Unless bimetaflism will accomplish this result, it will do them no good Free silver coinage, it is apparent from Monday's vote, is now seen by the majority of the American people to be hostile to their interests, and their enlightenment is largely the result of the recent debates in Congress. If the delay interposed by the silver Senators shall lead to a similar demonstration of the true nature of bimetallism, and bury it in the same grave with free colnage, it should be welcomed and not deplored.
